

Kim Johnson

We Are Not Promised Tomorrow

Although her life challenges have seemed insurmountable at times, Kim is filled with gratitude for all they have taught her. It is through these struggles that she has become resilient, empathetic and truly grateful for all the blessings in her life.

Kim has been an educational assistant for over twenty years and loves supporting and making connections with her students, who often face overwhelming barriers to success. She still finds the greatest reward in watching her students achieve their goals.

Because she has been blessed with such a beautiful life, it is important to Kim to share her time and energy to contribute to the greater good through volunteering. Currently she is a volunteer at Community Justice Initiatives, in the Revive program. She wholeheartedly believes in the power of restorative justice and feels fortunate to be part of the movement.

Kim has learned, because we are not promised tomorrow, how important it is to recognize and take advantage of all we have been blessed with today. This has fueled her passion for learning and self-growth, as well as jumping on the opportunity to try unfamiliar things and take part in new adventures!
